

Search

Search

Sign in

Study: Taking abortion pill at home as safe as in clinic

MARIA CHENG

Associated Press 17 May 2017

FILE - This Sept. 22, 2010 file photo shows bottles of the abortion-inducing drug RU-486 in Des Moines, Iowa. A new study published Tuesday, May 16, 2017 shows medical abortions done at home with online help and pills sent by More

LONDON (AP) — Medical abortions done at home with online help and pills sent in the mail appear to be just as safe as those done at a clinic, according to a new study.

The research tracked the outcomes of 1,000 women in Ireland and Northern Ireland, who used a website run by a group called Women on Web to get abortion pills. The Netherlands-based nonprofit provides advice and pills to women seeking an early abortion in more than 140 countries where access to abortion is restricted. Ireland and Northern Ireland have some of the world's strictest laws often only granting approval when a woman's life is at risk.

To use the service, women complete an online form, which is reviewed by a doctor. They are sent two drugs in the mail — mifepristone and misoprostol — and given instructions on how to take the pills, which have been used since 1988 to induce early abortions. They are later asked to fill out an evaluation form.

About 95 percent of the women in the study reported successfully ending their pregnancy; nearly all were less than nine weeks pregnant at the time of the online consultation. The researchers said less than 10 percent reported symptoms of a potentially serious complication like very heavy bleeding, fever or persistent pain, comparable to the rates for women who seek medical abortions at clinics where abortion is legal. Seven women needed a blood transfusion and 26 received antibiotics. No deaths were reported. Follow-up information was missing for about one-third of the 1,636 women who were sent pills over three years, so some complications may have been missed.

The study was published online Tuesday in the British journal, The BMJ. Women on Web provided the data and the patient feedback

Pippa Middleton's Wedding: Who's Invited? Yahoo UK Originals

What to read next

Ireland anticipates 10-fold rise in customs declarations post-Brexit
Reuters

Search

Search

Sign in

entirely outside the formal health care system can be safe and effective," said Dr. Abigail Aiken, an assistant professor at the University of Texas at Austin who led the study. "Women are very capable of managing their own abortions and they're able to determine themselves when they need to seek medical attention."

Qatar Airways™ NL - Special Online Offers
Qatar Airways™ Sponsored

Other experts agreed the study shows how women might be able to safely sidestep restrictive abortion laws.

"This undermines the efficacy of these laws and leaves them unenforceable," said Bernard Dickens, a professor emeritus of health law and policy at the University of Toronto, who co-wrote an accompanying commentary. He cited a number of legal loopholes that would make it difficult to prosecute people helping women have an abortion at home.

Two arrested over murder of Northern Ireland PC Ronan Kerr
The Guardian

Aiken said the website does not operate in the U.S. but that a telemedicine study of the abortion pill is underway.

Linda Kavanath, a spokeswoman for the Abortion Rights Campaign in Ireland, said women should be reassured about the safety of doing a medical abortion on their own, adding that the threat of a 14-year jail sentence in Ireland has had a chilling effect.

Dark money is pushing democracy in the UK over the edge| George Monbiot
The Guardian

"These services will exist until the legislation is changed to grant women access to abortion," she said. "Women will always find a way to have abortions and we're just fortunate that these safe methods now exist."

This story has been corrected to show the rate of complications is less than 10 percent, not less than 1 percent, and to show pills were sent to 1,636 women instead of 1,500.

Online abortion drugs are safe and effective but they're still illegal
International Business Times

Start the conversation

Sign in to post a message.

Wall Street Furious Over New Trading Algorithm
Ultimate4Trading Sponsored

Oxford student who stabbed her boyfriend could be spared jail because she has 'extraordinary' talent
Yahoo News UK

Search

Search

Sign in

Meet the vegan personal trainers bringing communities together through fitness

Evening Standard

Pippa Middleton's Wedding: Who's Invited?

Yahoo UK Originals

Teens Win Millions With Their A.I. Trading System

Start Up News Sponsored

How the mainstream media covered the Lab manifesto

Who is James Matthews? Everything you need to know about Pippa Middleton's billionaire future husband

Evening Standard

Britain's most evil: The depraved killers who are the UK's longest-serving prisoners

Search

Search

Sign in

LifeCell Sponsored

Australia: Children Sniffing Plane Fuel Sparks Health Crisis
Newsweek

How to impeach a president
The Guardian

Verlenging van Office 365 Personal

€ 7

Koop nu

Verlenging van Office 365 Home

€ 99

Koop nu